

Workshop – Tamsin Bicknell & Laura Abbott

Midwives and the interdisciplinary team are in a unique position but we do not always:

- Identify those who may have complex needs.
- Understand the challenges of legal and court needs for women involved in the CJS.
- Have a joined up approach for caring for women in the CJS.
- Know how to best respond to challenging responses.

In this workshop we want to consider together:

- What we must do to meet our duty of care, the NMC code and maintain human rights.
- What we should do in terms of Better Births, continuity of care, safe physical and mental health for women involved in the CJS.
- How we can ensure the ideal training for staff with the best clinical and emotional outcomes for women and babies.
- Consider what good support for the interdisciplinary team looks like.
